Abusive Partner Accountability and Engagement Training and Technical Assistance

The Center for Justice Innovation's Abusive Partner Accountability and Engagement Training and Technical Assistance is designed to help jurisdictions interested in enhancing their current approaches to domestic violence offender accountability and engagement.

The Center for Justice Innovation's Gender and Family Justice team offers free training and technical assistance to jurisdictions across the United States. With the support of the U.S. Department of Justice's Office on Violence Against Women (OVW), and in collaboration with Futures Without Violence and a multi-disciplinary team of national experts, we provide multi-disciplinary training and technical assistance to abusive partner intervention providers, both criminal and civil judges, court staff, prosecutors, tribal courts, defense bar, service providers, and victim advocates to identify strategies that are grounded in a coordinated, holistic community and justice system response to enhance accountability for and engagement with domestic violence offenders.

How We Can Help

The Center for Justice Innovation's technical assistance includes:

On-site work with jurisdictions seeking to enhance domestic violence offender accountability and engagement.

Practitioner-to-practitioner learning opportunities through webinars.

Dissemination of model documents and emerging best practices in the field.

Guidance with creating holistic responses to offender accountability, promoting victim safety, and developing effective partnerships with other agencies.

Regional Training Institutes for multi-disciplinary teams to learn from national experts and develop strategies to bring back to their communities.
